I am marching to help injured veterans like Nick Franklin

Nick served in the Princess of Wales Royal Regiment and was injured in Afghanistan as a result of an Improvised Explosive Device (IED) blast. This led to the amputation of his left leg below the knee, discharge from the Army and the end of his military career.

As well as learning to walk again he struggled with PTSD which stopped him interacting with people. This led to marital problems and he was on the brink of divorce.

Nick then found golf and through the support of On Course Foundation he got his life back together. He is now working again and has a happy family life. He credits this to golf which gives him the release he requires.

"With the help of the PGA coaches, the staff and my fellow beneficiaries I have improved my golf game and have become a better person by being more confident and a lot happier – my mental health has improved so much."
